John,

Apple does not agree with Plaintiffs' counter and it seems like the parties are getting further apart—not closer. Maybe we're misreading Plaintiffs' proposal but it appears to afford Apple fewer depositions than what Rule 30(b) provides while Plaintiffs would receive many more depositions than the rule's 10-deposition default. Happy to get on the phone again to clarify or otherwise discuss. Sounds like we might need to discuss the logistics of the submission as well.

Apple's offer from yesterday is still open by the way. Seems like the right thing for the parties to do is to agree on a number and make it reciprocal as between Apple and Epic. Apple requires no such reciprocity with respect to the class plaintiffs. No reason to burden the Court or ourselves when an equitable result is within sight.

Thanks,

Jay

Jay,

Plaintiffs make the following counter-proposal:

- 1) Plaintiffs may jointly depose the following 14 current or former Apple employees: Tim Cook, Matthew Fischer, Scott Forstall, Eric Friedman, Eric Gray, Mark Grimm, C.K. Haun, Trystan Kosmynka, Ron Okamoto, Carson Oliver, Shaan Pruden, Philip Schiller, Mike Schmid, and Phillip Shoemaker.
- 2) Apple reserves the right to object for good cause to the identity of any of the witnesses in #1, but it acknowledges that it already has agreed to the depositions of Messrs. Cook (subject to a dispute as to the length of his deposition), Fischer, Okamoto, and Shoemaker. To the extent Apple prevails, Plaintiffs are entitled to depose a current or former Apple employee in lieu of each such proposed witness.
- 3) As the Court ordered, the parties will submit a joint letter brief with respect to depositions of Eddy Cue and Craig Federighi. To the extent Plaintiffs prevail, the depositions of Eddy Cue and Craig Federighi (or either) will be in addition to the witnesses in #1.
- 4) To the extent the Court denies the depositions of Eddy Cue or Craig Federighi, Plaintiffs may seek depositions of two additional current or former Apple employees.
- 5) Apple may depose 14 Plaintiffs or their current or former employees across all three Plaintiff groups (but no more than 7 of these 14 may be individual developer or consumer plaintiffs, or in the case of developer plaintiff PSB, any current or former employees or 30(b)(6) designee). If Apple deposes Scott Forstall or Phillip Shoemaker, they also count towards this limit.
- 6) If Plaintiffs depose 15 or 16 current or former Apple employees, Apple may seek 15 or 16 depositions, respectively, of Plaintiffs or their current or former employees across all three Plaintiff groups (but no more than 7 of these 15 or 16 may be individual developer or consumer plaintiffs, or in the case of developer plaintiff PSB, any current or former employees or 30(b)(6) designee). If Apple deposes Scott Forstall or Phillip Shoemaker, they also count towards this limit.

7) The parties reserve their rights to serve Rule 30(b)(6) topics, which do not count toward the limit on the number of depositions.

8) The parties agree that they may depose third parties above and beyond what is agreed to here.

9) Any witness identified by any party as a trial witness who has not already been deposed shall be made available for deposition by the other parties in advance of trial.

Subject: RE: Apple App Cases -- Apple Depositions, Epic's Data Requests, Texts and Instant Messges

All,

So there is no confusion about what Apple offered on today's meet and confer to resolve the dispute on number of depositions, Apple's offer is that Plaintiffs may take up to 13 depositions of Apple witnesses. This number is exclusive of Eddy Cue and Craig Federighi. If the Court orders either or both of these depositions at the hearing scheduled for January 21, Apple agrees that those would be in addition to the 13. This offer is contingent on Plaintiffs' agreement that Apple can take the deposition of 13 Epic witnesses, and possibly 1-2 more depending on if Epic is successful with respect to Messrs. Cue and/or Federighi. Apple, of course, does not need a similar concession from either set of class plaintiffs.

We suggest a follow-up call this afternoon/evening so we can avoid wasting time and energy on motion practice on this.

Best,

Jay

Counsel,

Please advise if you are available to meet and confer tomorrow during the period from 10:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. PT. Epic will be prepared to discuss depositions of Apple witnesses, Epic's data requests, and production of texts and instant messages. Epic believes that the parties must discuss at least depositions of Apple witnesses tomorrow per the Court's order. If Apple is not prepared to discuss Epic's data requests or production of texts and instant messages, please provide times for later this week.

Thank you.
